and held in $500 personal recognizance.

QUESTIONS WITNESSED

Walter Booth, friend of McAuliffe, was held in $500 bail as a material witness.

Booth, although he asked the hearing, presented no evidence but contented himself with a brief cross-examination of Thomas J. Mahan, the taxi-driver, regarding the latter's testimony that he heard Rosenbloom say "take that," as the fatal shot was fired.

Shack testified he saw the flash of the shot and saw the gun in Rosenbloom's hand, but he could not recall much else about the events preceding the shooting which had followed a night of "whoops," including much drinking and a taxi cruise about the city.

Police said McAuliffe, riding in the taxi with Booth, Rosenbloom, Shack and the Mahan girl, had been accused of involving one of the girls and had endeavored to stop the cab at Shawmut ave. and West Brookline at 20 so he could have a party where he was not wanted.

"As I opened the door to let him out, the shot was fired and McAuliffe pitched face down on the sidewalk," testified Mahan. "Every body in the cab ran except Booth who stayed at his friend's side. He chased the cab, but they disappeared."

Mahan is the brother of Mary Mahan of South Boston who was murdered in the Blue Hill reservation several months ago.

According to the police the party was a congenial one until a few minutes before the fatal shooting.

Booth said that he did not know either the two men in the other party or the two girls, but today he identified Rosenbloom as one of the men and the one who had fired the shot at McAuliffe.

McAuliffe's home town is New Bedford. He was the son of Mrs. Mary E. McAuliffe of 400 Purchase st., that city, and was one of a family of 19 children. He had been in Boston for about 12 years and lived at the Dwight at home, with his brother, John McAuliffe, who is a permanent for a building wrecking company. The friend who was connected with the International Brotherhood of Building Workers in his employment was a building wrecker. He was a steady worker and his only recreation was on Saturday night, according to his testimony. He was well known in the South End.

Judge Dowd Finds His Namesake's Name Is 'Phony'

Thomas H. Dowd, judge; John J. Dowd, arresting officer; James J. Dowd, defendant, charged with drunkenness.

This lineup caused a knitting of judicial brows in municipal court today, where, as the court remarked, it looked like a case of "too much Dowd," but Judge Dowd scored heavily a moment later, and a broad smile was in evidence the rest of the session.

His questioning of the prisoner in the dock brought out that the defendant's name was Mahan. He took the name Dowd just because it happened to be the first one he thought of when he was arrested, and he was as much surprised as the other two Dowds with the way things turned out. The case was thrown out.

BILL WILL CURB POWER OF FIRMS' DEFIANCE

Electric light companies who have been defying state regulations in appealing to the federal courts against decisions of the State Department of Public Utilities, will be curbed under a bill reported today by the legislative committee on power and light.

The bill in general gives wide scope to the public utilities commission in allowing municipalities to establish their own power plants.

Municipalities which decide to establish lighting plants and plan to take over private companies, will agree on rates, will have the commission settled by the public utilities department.

Recourse to the courts will be made on questions of law only the state department having final jurisdiction.

Forced down when the motor stalled in their cabin plane, Lieut. Adolph M. Backstrom and Mason Sears, both of the Curtiss Flying Service, were injured today at Boston Airport.

Lieut. Backstrom was taken to East Boston Relief Hospital with a bad cut on the left temple, and bruises and abrasions. Sears was cut on the forehead, but remained at the field after receiving first aid.

A chief student instructor for the Curtiss Flying Service, Lieut. Backstrom was giving flying instructions to Sears, who is operations manager for the company.

While over East Boston the motor stalled and the pilot was unable to make the runway at the airport. The ship was forced down on the smooth surface of the runway, breaking the propeller, crippling the undercarriage and bending the motor mount.

U.S. Gives Up 'Daddy of All Troop Ships'

New York, April 8 (AP)—On the seventh anniversary of her last sailing as a military transport, the S.S. Leviathan, which carried more than 100,000 American Doughboys safely to France in 1917 and 1918, passed today out of the control of the U. S. Government.

At a formal ceremony aboard the giant liner as she lay at her dock in New York, the ship was sold for $400,000 and was exchanged, whereby the shipping board and the U. S. Shipping board and the American Merchant Marine act the property of the U. S. Shipping board.

Lips, Inc. of which Paul W. Chadwick is head.

There was a touch of sadness about the ceremony, as the ship was the last of the Leviathan class to be sold by the shipping board, an expression of the shipping board's regret that the ship was to be sold.

Except for the period between 9 and 11 o'clock, it was considerably warmer than yesterday throughout the day.

The warmth in the early forenoon sent hundreds to the beach. Revere reporting a very unusual April weekday crowd and more than 1000 before noon. This number, which increased hourly, included mostly women and children and five others, three girls and two men.

Under the influence of a northerly wind, the mercury began falling at 9 o'clock and was down to 60 at 11.

Like a rally in the stock market, the mercury shot up seven points, to 67, at 12 and then up 11 more in the noon hour, touching 78 in a brief record in the next half hour and another before 2.

When it was two degrees higher than yesterday, Sunday's maximum was 84 at 4 p. m.

STUPIDITY IS CHARGED BY PROBER

That the "stupidity or obstinacy" of a sub-employee was responsible for the disturbance at the State Farm in Bridgewater, which resulted in the serving of corned beef on Good Friday, after servings of fish chowder had been overtured, was charged today at a hearing before the House ways and means committee by Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware.

"I believe that the House should officially deplore the episode and urge upon the department of correction such discipline of the offending employee that it shall not happen again nor occur in any other State institution," he declared.

"Good Friday is sacred to a great many people. Perhaps the best thing in the lives of the inmates at Bridgewater is the influence that religion has upon them. And it is a poor step towards reform to seek to heat down their religious faith."

ANTI-FAT PERIL IS STRESSED TO DOCTORS

Discussing tuberculosis before 1500 physicians at the opening session of the American College of Physicians at the Hotel Statler today, Dr. Lawrence Brown of Saratoga Lake, N. Y., warned women and girls against the dangers of refusing and advised those of physicians to "broomstick" before to inspire to fully developed womanhood.

"Women who do not want to get fat are dieting when they should be developing," he said. "They are retarding their own progress and they are exposing themselves to tuberculosis and to the danger of ruddy health does not exclude the disease."

In his treatise, Dr. Brown said that through scientific treatment tuberculosis is decreasing and the outlook is encouraging.

Visiting various clinics at Boston hospitals during the morning, the audience gathered at the hotel for the afternoon for the opening session. Addresses of welcome were given by Dr. David L. Edger, dean of Harvard Medical School; Dr. Alexander S. Hays, dean of Boston University Medical School; Dr. A. B. Barnes, president of the Massachusetts Medical Society; and Dr. Lincoln Davis, president of Suffolk Medical Society.

JAIL WOMAN IN LYNN FOR BASE

Unable to pay a fine of $125 imposed in Lynn court today for keeping and exposing liquor for sale, Mrs. Stella Kovalska of River st., Lynn, mother of six children, was sentenced to 30 days in Salem jail. On being told she would have to work out the fine at the rate of 50 cents a day, Mrs. Kovalska broke into hysterical sobs. She has a husband, John, who will have to take care of the children, the eldest of which is nine years.

Hearst Efficiency Abroad Extolled by Boston Man

The praise for the efficiency of the Hearst organization abroad was voiced by Asst. U. S. Atty. Hubert C. Thompson, who returned to his office in the Federal Building today after a sojourn of six weeks on the continent.

"You have got to take your hat off to Hearst," said Thompson in describing the thrill he got at the American reading room in Paris, where he found daily editions of the London Evening American file.

"It was in the columns of one of these papers that I read of the destruction by fire of part of the office of my law partner in Havre, which, fortunately, I found out very early, turned did not cause any great damage."

Thompson spent the greater part of his time in England and France in attendance at trials in the courts of those countries, the news there being interspersed with trips to historic spots around London and Paris.

Night Life's Too Hot, Helen Quits It Cold

By DAVID P. SENTNER

International News Service Staff Correspondent
New York, April 8.—Similar to a champion announcing his retirement from the ring, Helen Morgan, prima donna show girl and night club hostess, today announced her retirement from night life. The life is too "strenuous," was the reason given by the dark-eyed girl who made one of the season's hits in "Showboat."

Miss Morgan made her announcement while waiting to be tried by the government on a charge of "maintaining a common nuisance" in her night club. But she denied that this difficulty with the government had anything to do with her decision to step out.

In explaining her decision to quit night club entertaining, Miss Morgan said after her "Showboat" and going to work in the club "she was too tired out" to enjoy life.

"Of course, if I ever get hungry and need a job I should not hesitate to go back into the business," Miss Morgan is charmingly slender but not hungry looking.

555 LASTERS OF 38 FACTORIES STRIKE

More than 500 lasters went on strike today, affecting 38 Boston shoe factories, according to their leaders who claim that the strikers constitute 75 per cent. of the factory employees in Boston.

Plans for picketing factories in an effort to swell the number of strikers were made at a mass meeting at Wells Hall, Washington st., South End.

The strikers want recognition and pay equal to that of leather in Lynn, the leaders said. They are members of the Boston Leather Workers' Union, which is independent of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

It is said that the manufacturers have agreed not to recognize any union other than the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, but the independent claim two concerns have signed contracts with them since the split.

Representatives of the Lynn Lasters' Independent Union were at today's meeting.

More than 100 of the strikers face fines of $25 if they do not return to work in a few days, according to Charles L. Dain, general secretary-treasurer of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. These workers, he explained, are members of his union and under agreement not to participate in an "outlaw" strike. He said the employers could sue them.

Maguire Co. Trustees in Suit for $91,966

Bertholomew A. Brickley, Henry V. Cunningham and Francis J. Leahy, trustees in bankruptcy of the J. W. Maguire Company have brought suit in superior court for $91,966 against Agnes Maguire, of 17 Stratford st., Melrose, to recover $91,966, which it is claimed she owes to the company as the property of the Maguire Company at a time it was insolvent.

Fail to Reach Vote on Elevated Bill

The sub-committee of the legislative committee on metropolitan affairs failed to reach a vote on the bill today, after a long session. The committee was scheduled to have another meeting later in the hope that the bill could be brought to the full committee in executive session tomorrow.

Woman, Man Held in Death of Girl

Mrs. Margaret C. Fox, 61, of Harvard ave., Allston, was held in bond of $1000 today in Municipal Court on a charge of illegal arrest in connection with the death of Muriel Edger, 21, of Franklin st., Allston. William Peters of Baymont, Allston, charged with being an accessory, was held in bail of $2000. Both will appear in court April 22.

CRIME PROBES HEADQUARTERS J. W. ALLEN

New York, April 8 (INS)—A new organization called the committee on the detection and prosecution of crime has been formed by Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War and now head of the national crime commission. It was announced here today. The committee will be under the direction of J. Weston Allen, former Attorney-General of Massachusetts and author of a model criminal code.

In making the announcement Baker said: "There is a feeling that our whole system of detecting and apprehending criminals falls short of efficiency. The committee will study the situation and obtain the advice of those best qualified to suggest steps to be taken to improve our police systems generally."

DEFENSE MAY CALL JUDGE

Hartford, Conn., April 8.—Superior Court Judge Edward M. Yeomans and State Police Commissioner Robert T. Hurley today faced the possibility of being called as defense witnesses in the trial of William E. Egan, attorney, indicted for conspiracy to defraud in connection with the Rogers Watkins stock swindle. The trial, which the judge and police commissioner's names were injected, is scheduled to reopen tomorrow.

A decision on the proposal to bring the two law enforcement officers into the case was made today at a conference of the defense counsel, Henry J. Cullen and William E. Hyde.

The names of Judge Yeomans and Commissioner Hurley, brought into the trial when Watkins, brought to trial in State prison, testified Egan had told him he had used $25,000 of Watkins' money with Judge Yeomans to square my cash with the courts."

Police Say Ide's Death Was Suicide

Police today concluded their investigation into the death of George Ide, chauffeur for Sylvester Brown of Spruce st., Braintree, announced himself as "suicide."

He had taken his own life, Medical Examiner Jones had pronounced Ide a suicide.

Ide shot himself while in bed beside his sleeping wife, who three days previous had returned from Florida with Mr. and Mrs. Brown, by whom she was employed as a maid.

MORGAN AND MELLON IN N. E. POWER FIGHT

ELECTRIC AND GAS MERGERS PROSECUTED

That rival power companies are fighting tooth and nail for control of the New England field by secret deals behind the scenes was made apparent today, despite general denial.

Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston was mentioned as a big factor, allied with the J. P. Morgan interests, which are said to have acquired control of the Massachusetts Gas Company and to have defeated the Mellon interests.

For the Edison Company, President Charles L. Edger said: "It certainly should not advise anybody to pay attention to these reports. A Massachusetts Gas Company is being formed."

MELLON FORCES BEATEN

But that a new era of power distribution and control was dawning was not denied.

Some months ago the Koppers Co. of Pittsburgh, representing the Mellon interests, was reported to have acquired control of the Connecticut Gas Co. of Boston. It is said that there were display advertisements that stated but for some mysterious reason the deal failed.

One explanation today was that the Koppers Co. was thwarted at the eleventh hour when it was discovered to be a "pet agent" of the Mellon interests.

Summary of the merger followed announcement that the Edison Co. had acquired 20 acres of land on the Mystic river in Everett to erect a $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 steam generating plant.

WILL BREAK GROUND

Ground is soon to be broken for a switchboard house and connecting tunnel, but officials of the Edison Co. indicated some time would elapse before the generating plant is erected.

In its annual report President Edger of the Edison Company, explaining an agreement with the New England Power Company, said:

"The line is now under construction between the distribution station at South Boston and the Edison Company at Woburn. It is expected that during the coming winter the Edison Company will have completed the line from Woburn to the Waymouth station, and the New England Power Company at Milbury, and they in turn will send over the transmission line the power which will be generated by the Edison Company, and this interchange will probably continue for a number of years."

MAY BE REMOTE

This would indicate that a new Edison generating plant on the New England field is rather remote.

Officially the Edison Co. today denied that J. P. Morgan & Co., General Electric Co., Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston, and Edison Power Co. owned any stock in the new generating plant.

The largest individual holding of approximately 25 per cent. of the stock is owned by the Massachusetts Utilities Associates and its controlled company, the Massachusetts Generating Company.

The Assurance Company of Canada holds 5000 shares and the General Electric Co. holds 10,000 shares. A sort of employee investment-financing organization, owned by the Edison Co., holds 2000 shares.

Harvard University Corp. owns 5000 shares of Edison stock.

LABOR WILL INSIST ON PROSECUTION

Elizabethton, Tenn., April 8 (AP)—A list of 20 Elizabethton business men today was in the hands of labor leaders, who were trying to obtain evidence that they took part in the kidnapping of two American Federation of Labor representatives with a view of instituting criminal prosecution against them.

William Green, president of the Federation.

Six other business men were under bond on charges of felonies against John B. Parris, a county organizer for the Federation, who was roused from sleep last Tuesday night and ordered to leave town. An aged sister of Parris came to her brother's aid with a piano and her belongings.

The other representatives of the labor body, Edward McGraw and Alfred Hoffman, were said to have been forced to leave Elizabethton the same night, however, and in connection with their kidnapping the present investigation is under way.

LEAVE ON HONEYMOON

Central Falls, R. I., April 8.—Investigation of the death of Florence Wybrick, 15, whose body was found beside the New Haven tracks near the Cross st. bridge, took a new turn this afternoon.

Despite the fact that the medical examiner asserted the girl was killed by a train, Deputy Police Chief Joseph P. Chappell, Fred Wadsworth, chief inspector of Pawtucket, police, to assist in further investigation.

Wadsworth is now trying to trace the companion of the girl and train movements on Friday night. The body was found beside the railroad tracks Saturday morning.

Passengers Escape in Bus Accident

Greenfield, April 8 (AP)—Fourteen passengers on a Greenfield-Barnstable bus were shaken but escaped serious injury today when the bus was forced from the Barnstable road and struck a tree.

The bus driver, W. L. Hall of Brattleboro, said the accident occurred when an automobile operated by Mrs. Elizabeth Livingston of Greenfield, swung out to pass a road machine. Her car hit the truck. She escaped injury.

Dying Man Found in Front of Home

Gilbert Rexford, 43, of 19 Chapman st., Charlestown, was found by Patrolman John Hanlon of the city station, unconscious on the sidewalk in front of his home.

He was bleeding from the nose and mouth and Hadden sent him to Haymarket Square Hospital, where he was pronounced dead by Dr. Robbins.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

MR. BOSTON had a box lunch carefully tucked away under his arm when he stepped in out of the wide open places today.

"Why the supply of nourishment?" queried Miss Mcweeney, who was making an assault on a couple of sandwiches between editions.

"Going to the amateurs tonight," said the veteran.

"I can now understand," chirped Mcweeney. "I once went to the amateurs and I was away from home long enough to give my wife grounds for a divorce for desertion."

"I know a lot of birds who would take in the amateurs if they felt their homelike sparring partners would tie the can on to them," declared Mr. Boston, jokingly.

Anyhow, the amateur made one forget about everything else," interrupted Freddy Lane. "There once was a kid from Revere who wrecked all of the opposition."

"You mean Bob Jones," said Mr. Boston. "Bob always could hit. In fact he is now getting along very well in the pro ranks."

"I understand that tonight's show will get going at 7 o'clock and that the final bout will be staged somewhere around 2 a. m. That will mean seven hours of boxing, fighting, clowning and what not. By 2 o'clock the boys will probably agree they had received their money's worth."

"There are thousands of people who wouldn't miss a minute of the action in the amateurs. They will be on duty during the three nights of the show. They are like the double-header baseball fans who won't attend a single game, but who are always in the bleachers for the bargain attraction."

"When you think you are tired as a result of watching the amateur pure in the battles for fame, consider the youngsters who are furnishing the action. In most cases they are boys from distant cities and still in their teens."

"I don't think the world has any greater heroes than our amateur boxers."

"The team from the Pacific Coast is particularly strong. California has always produced brilliant amateur boxers. I think this is because the big amateur club on the Coast encourage the youthful milk-widders. They furnish them with suitable training accommodations. When they travel, they have the best, which is only proper."

"In former national tournaments, the Coast teams have always shown to good advantage. This year's outfit will not be an exception to the general rule, according to the advance dope."

"HERE'S an item for your columns," remarked Mcweeney as he tossed a story across the sports desk to Mr. Boston. The veteran read the following with interest:

Jack Kelly, noted Boston College and B. A. A. and Olympic track coach, is an expert stenographer. For many years he was United States immigrant inspector, stationed at Boston, and his stenographic ability was an asset in taking testimony and writing reports. He used an antiquated, battered old typewriter, one of the ancient kind, called a "blind writer," which necessitated raising the carriage to see what had been written.

"Gradually these machines were replaced by modern ones, 'visible writers,' but Jack clung to the disreputable one that he liked. The Labor Department at Washington sent in many requests to have his particular machine turned in and replaced by a new one, but Jack Kelly refused to let it go."

For some time Boston College had been trying to have Jack sign a contract to give his full time to coaching their track athletes, but he kept putting it off. He liked the work of the immigration service and was in no hurry to change.

"One day came peremptory orders from the department at Washington to turn in that antiquated typewriter. They were transmitted to Jack by the commissioner, who said: 'Jack, there's no getting out of this; you've got to get rid of that machine!'"

"A. L. H. right; said Jack, 'If I can't have the typewriter I want I'll quit!'"

"So before turning the machine in, he wrote two last letters on it: 'To the United States Immigration Service and the second to the Labor Department submitting his resignation.'"

CHAPTER 1

CONRAD GILL, diamond broker, had met Colonel Constition in Los Angeles and offered to buy the Constition intaglio. He would not sell. Mr. Gill had been prepared to go to $300,000.

His son, Victor, was driving him back from Constition's.

As the car drew abreast of a tree a man leaped out of the darkness.

"Stop the car and stick up your hands!"

The eyes above the triangle of handkerchief were impressive.

The broker shivered a little.

"What do you want?"

"The Constition intaglio. Hand 'em over—quick!"

"But we haven't got them!"

"I'll give you 30 seconds." The voice was savage.

Mr. Gill's blood ran cold.

"But I tell you we haven't got them!" he insisted, desperately. "Constition wouldn't sell!"

Victor Gill maintained a watchful silence.

"Get out!" commanded the highwayman. "I'm going to search you!"

But his search revealed nothing. Meanwhile another car swooped up and stopped.

The holder man was staring wildly at a girl in the car.

The girl was pretty. There swept across her face a tempest of bewilderment and horror and contempt.

The bandit staggered back, dropped the pistol and disappeared.

Before Mr. Gill could protest, the girl's car roared away. Turning, he saw his son examining the pistol the man had dropped.

"It isn't loaded," said Victor. "She certainly recognized him. He was the man we ran into at Constition's."

Mr. Gill whistled.

The original estate of Don Silvestre Calderon, venturista and former subject of the King of Spain, had comprised many thousands of acres of that picturesque peninsula of the southern California coast locally known as Point Almo.

Jim Beasley operated a roadhouse known as the Green Crocodile at the Point.

Some five miles north of the Green Crocodile the Constition grounds lay between the road and the edge of the cliff.

Shortly after the coming of the Americans the body of Don Silvestre was found in one of the deeper caves on the shore. Col Constition had set a door over the narrow mouth of the cave and tied into it a brass plate in memory of the man who had died there.

A minute or two after her encounter with Mr. Gill and the man who had concealed his face, the girl, Gail Hollister, found herself facing Col Constition in his living room. Dark and mysterious tones lined two of the walls. A steel vault was set into one of the walls.

"McCuan said he was sending me an authority on antiquities," said the colonel. "One who thoroughly understood catalog work, Miss Hollister."

He struck a little Chinese gong. "Send Mr. Weasels, Dimity."

The old man hurried out. "Another of my antiquities," the colonel chuckled. "I've had him with me for 30 years."

Dimity returned, bearing a tray set for two.

"I'll have Weasels take you to your room," the colonel said. "I'd love to see your collection first, if it's not too late." Gail said the colonel slipped his shag.

"Splendid! You shall."

Gail picked up a little Chinese figure exquisitely carved.

"Isn't it lovely?" she cried.

"It is! There's a year ago with it, too. John O'Neil and I got it in northern China years ago."

Gail's heart seemed to stop beating.

"Who did you say?" she whispered.

"John O'Neil, the explorer. I was with him in China. He died 10 years ago."

Constition went to the vault and please turn to page 15, column 6.

THE CURIOUS QUIZZER

Every day he asks a question and pictures those questioned.

THE QUESTION

What is your opinion in regard to the city's purchase of athletic uniforms for high school students?

JOSEPH PICKFORD, 54 Train St., Dorchester—Certainly the city should purchase athletic uniforms for high school students. Well organized athletics do more than almost anything else to promote good school spirit, and students should be encouraged in every possible way to take part in them. How can that be expected if he knows that the city does not consider athletics deserving of a wholehearted support?

DORIS EDWARDS, 23 Front St., Atlantic—I do not think the city should be obliged to pay for athletic uniforms for high school students. Boys of the high school age are not going to be kept from their uniforms in good condition and such of the city's money as is spent in other ways is better spent in that way.

McCuan said he was sending me an authority on antiquities, said the colonel. "One who thoroughly understood catalog work, Miss Hollister."

He struck a little Chinese gong. "Send Mr. Weasels, Dimity."

The old man hurried out. "Another of my antiquities," the colonel chuckled. "I've had him with me for 30 years."

Dimity returned, bearing a tray set for two.

"I'll have Weasels take you to your room," the colonel said. "I'd love to see your collection first, if it's not too late."

ROOSEVELT'S BOMBING IS HUNTED

IT'S A LOVE SONG FOR LIFE

SUSPENDS BREWSTER

NEW YORK, April 8 (INS)—While Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, with characteristic courage, manifested no alarm over the bomb addressed to him at Albany and mailed to him in this city, it developed today that the bomb was more or less a "dud."

After careful tests the police and postal authorities agreed that there wasn't one chance in a million of it exploding.

The authorities believe it was intended only as a "bears bomb" and was in line with other attempts to intimidate the executive. The bomb was found in parcel post matter at the main postoffice here yesterday by accident, when a porter stepped on the packet and set it afire.

Police determined to run the bomb perpetrator down, however it was learned that recently a post card threatening his life was sent to the Governor. Also the police wanted to know more concerning the incendiary fire that destroyed the $200,000 home of the Governor's son-in-law, C. A. Dall, at Mt. Pleasant, N. Y.

Governor Roosevelt has a reputation for gentility and good fellowship, and his friends were amazed that he would be singled out as the objective of a bomb plot.

ROOSEVELT'S BOMBING IS HUNTED

IT'S A LOVE SONG FOR LIFE

SUSPENDS BREWSTER

NEW YORK, April 8 (AP)—Means of countering periods of unemployment were discussed with President Hoover today by former Governor Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, who declared that American methods of keeping employment statistics are ten years behind those of other nations.

Mr. Brewster called on behalf of the conference of governors which met at New Orleans in December and took up the question of balancing periods of unemployment with construction of Government works, as advocated by Mr. Hoover in his campaign speeches.

The principal question at this time, Brewster said, is in keeping an adequate check on the extent of unemployment. He declared that the states are better agencies for the development of this data than would be a centralized federal bureau. This, he declared, was proved a year ago by the unemployment report of the Department of Labor in response to a Senate resolution asking for statistics of unemployment.

Smoking in Bed Causes Death

Accidental death was the verdict of Medical Examiner West today in the case of William Purcell, 60, who was found dead, partially burned, on his bed in the home of John Greaves, 208 rd., Weston, last night. It is said he had been suffocated by the smoke from the bed clothing.

Chief J. Summer Viles of the Weston police department reported that Purcell had been smoking in bed and smoke from his pipe had set the clothing afire.

Dog Attacks Boy

Charles Jones, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Jones of 311 Madison ave., Bedford, was badly bitten in the right leg by a dog while playing near his home.

Edwin M. Brooks, Attorney, Dead

Edwin M. Brooks, well-known Boston attorney for the past quarter of a century and prominent in Wellesley affairs, died at his home on State st., that town, following a brief attack of pneumonia. His funeral will be from the Wellesley Congregational Church tomorrow afternoon at 2 30 o'clock.

Spurned by Girl, Son of Diplomat Suicide

Chicago, April 8 (AP)—A youth who wrote of unrequited love for a Northwestern University Co-ed, and then ended his life on the University Campus by drinking poison, was identified as Timon De Courton, a graduate of Sorbonne University in Paris and the son of a French ambassadorial attaché at Constantinople.

ACTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD
The World's Greatest Authority

NO TRUMP TAKE-OUTS AT CONTRACT.
The following will briefly outline the more important No Trump Take-Outs:

Take-Outs to Major Suits.

1. Take out with any FIVE CARD Major suit as good as an original bid, unless the side strength in hand and its distribution warrant rather a No Trump suit than a take-out.
2. Take out with any FIVE CARD Minor suit as good as a defensive bid under the same conditions as outlined above.
3. Take out with any SEVEN CARD Minor suit if hand contains a singleton, is void of a suit or if both suit and hand lack the required re-entries for its establishment at No Trump.
4. Take out with any EIGHT CARD Minor suit whatever.

The bidding and play of a hand is a bold business and Contract Bridge will be given in tomorrow's article.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions received from bridge players. Write to him at the Boston Evening American, 100 State Street, Boston, Mass. (Incl. 10c for postage.)

MEDBURY SAYS—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY
A HOLLYWOOD girl went to sleep the other night and thought her mother was using the ladder.

American Tragedies
The henpecked husband who found a quarter in his pocket and thought he had somebody else's trousers on.

Unpopular Songs
She was only a chiropractor's daughter, but she knew all the heels in town.

Take It Or Leave It
Police men ought to make good on their word; they've had so much experience in kitchens.

Null And Void
The college student who was so sure he couldn't let any of the fraternalists rush him.

Ode to a Cashier
If the books don't balance—buy a new hat.

You're Right
Our rum runners don't enjoy the freedom of the seas.

Auto-Suggestion
Some of the roads in the Middle West are so muddy that even the turtles have to be towed.

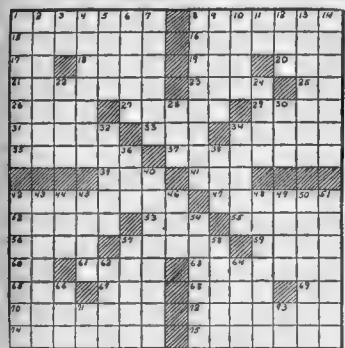

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

MERELY MARGY

Story by Lloyd Mayer

"MY dear, I'm ALL-of-a-DIFFER at this point, so I can't I mean I'm PRACTICALLY ready to ROLL over and aNOUNCE myself with peanut BUTTER on account of this enGAGEMENT of BELL to that SEPIA little KIDNEY-Fluffer, do you know what I mean! Actually, my dear, it's too perfectly exHIBITION because I mean there's practically NO WAY OUT of it as far as I can see. REALLY, my dear, I'm SIMPLY LIVID about the situation because I was TALKING volubly to

Bull about it today, my dear, and I TOLD him I'd do ANYTHING to SAVE him from the TOLLS of that usurpation HELL out only we BOTH AGREED it would be no SOAP to eLOPE because then we'd BOTH be out of LUCK with regard to the transZition because I mean SHE'S got COUSINS of it and of course HAD WEALTHY relatives simply CRAWLING with SHERLOCK, my dear! GOSH, isn't it perfectly POISONOUS how you have to conSIDer the maTerial side of it, sort off! Well, ANYways, my dear, I've GRIMLY determined to talk to BASH about the odd business because he's one of the FEW people I've ever MET who's ACTUALLY got BRAINS enough to COPE with my MENTAL PHOBOSSES and REALLY get my point of VIEW on things like that, my dear. I mean, for a MAN, I HOPEFULLY think he's quite BRIGHT at times, my dear—I mean I ACTUALLY DO!"

Root Plan an Abandonment of American Interests; War Bred a Race of Internationalists in the U. S.

THE greatest curse of the late war was not its cost in American lives and treasure.

Its greatest curse was the production of a race of internationalists in the United States, people who spend their lives working to get us involved in more of Europe's brawls.

They fought to get us into the League of Nations until the people spoke in the presidential elections of 1920 and 1924.

They fought to get us into the League's World Court and almost succeeded. In 1926 the Senate voted to join the Court, but with "reservations" designed to protect us from some of the more obvious harm that the League's Court could do us.

Chief of the reservations was number five, which forbade the League Council from even asking the Court to give an "advisory opinion" on any subject in which the United States claimed an interest—unless we consented to it.

The purpose was to prevent a court of ten foreigners and one American from issuing "advisory opinions" affecting the world's judgment on such subjects as our right to exclude the Japanese, our right to have a protective tariff, and the right of our government to collect from European governments the money owed us.

The Senate saw we would be morally bound to abide by any opinion rendered by a Court with an American judge on it. Many real Americans would fall for the internationalists' hue and cry that the United States must take its medicine. The "advisory opinion" was a neat scheme for Europe to run our affairs as it chose. Hence the reservation.

Now we have a new proposition from the League of Nations, framed by the internationalist lawyer, Elihu Root. He went to Geneva at the invitation of the League. Mr. Root has before been called on to accomplish by devious means what big interests could not accomplish directly.

Mr. Root, aided by Sir Cecil Hurst, famous British lawyer, proposes that we give up our right to absolutely prevent advisory opinions. Our representative, sitting in the Council of the League of Nations, is to be allowed to protest against the giving of any advisory opinion that displeases us, but the World Court can go ahead and prepare its opinion over our protest. If we do not like it, we can withdraw from the Court. Thereupon the opinion will be published to the world and the United States branded as a quitter.

The obvious expectation, openly expressed in Geneva, is that we will not face the world's criticism, and will never withdraw once we have joined the Court. If we take the Root substitute for reservation five, we are expected to stay and hear the Court's opinion and follow it.

The Root-Hurst plan is an abandonment of American interests, an invitation to the League's 10-1 Anti-American Court to assume control over our national life.

Elihu Root, a gentleman who is politically known as the root of all evil, is working as usual for the international bankers and the privileged interests.

Bay State's Loss

James H. Vahey and Henry L. Kincaide Each Had Served the Public Well

In the deaths of James H. Vahey and of Senator Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, Massachusetts has suffered a severe loss.

Each had labored long and diligently in the public service. Each will be greatly missed.

Senator Kincaide's place at the State House will be difficult to fill. Governor Allen, Lieutenant-Governor Youngman and President Gaspar G. Bacon of the State Senate all ready have paid glowing tribute to his conspicuous services.

The death of James H. Vahey is a loss to the Massachusetts bar. It removes a notable figure from the field of politics. Union labor also has lost a warm friend and an able advocate.

Human Nature

The Same North and South, In and Out of Cotton Mills

It is with deep and sincere sympathy, rather than in any spirit of jubilation, that merchants and manufacturers of New England observe that the textile industry of North Carolina is having its "labor troubles."

Mr. Fred E. Beal, of the National Textile Workers' Union, whom New Bedford remembers, as well as Lawrence and Dover, has camped before the gates of the Lorry Mills, a Manville-Jencks plant at Gastonia. WITH Mr. Beal, we read, is Mr. George Fanning, representing the official organ of the Communist party of America. The N. T. W. is not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Only three or four days before Governor Gardner ordered North Carolina troops to the mills we were told in a Washington dispatch that "Massachusetts has lost another distinction." North Carolina, having realized at last on "such advantages as proximity to source of supply, CHEAP LABOR AND UNRESTRICTED WORKING CONDITIONS," was now definitely "at the top of the heap," as the "leading cotton manufacturing State of the Union."

If there was any protest from this neighborhood it was quite inaudible, for another dispatch from Washington, on the same day, called attention to the fact that in the year 1927 seven States turned out more than one-half of all the manufactured goods of the Union.

Of these States, Massachusetts stood seventh, and in relation to North Carolina like this:

	No. of estab-	Earnings	Wages	Value of
	lishments	(Average)		Products
Massachusetts	10,057	$75,000	$705,929,540	$3,317,851,888
North Carolina	1,286	$20,450	$18,254,434	$164,546,612

Plainly there was nothing HERE to be disturbed about. We have three times North Carolina's number of manufacturing establishments, we employ nearly three times as many workers, we pay them more than four times as much in wages and we produce nearly three times as much in value. HAD North Carolina assumed the leadership of a single industry? Good luck to her!

The advent of "labor troubles" to the textile towns of the State is surprising only in that it has been delayed so long. Commenting more than a year ago on certain observations in the Blue Book of Southern Progress, put out by the Manufacturers Record of Baltimore, Mr. Frederick G. Fassett wrote in The Transcript:

"There is mention of 'abundant and intelligent labor.' Such emphasis upon the labor supply is not new, but it suggests an interesting question as to the future, a question being asked with increasing frequency: Human nature is the same North and South. Human wants and aspirations are the same. How long will it be before the same labor problems which confront manufacturers in the North will face those of the South?"

We begin to read the answer to that question.

In the New Bedford troubles of a year ago the National Textile Workers were a third party to the dispute, the "outsiders" who kept the police busy and led to the calling out of local militiamen. Before North Carolina is done with them men who have moved their plants to the South because of the advantage offered by "cheaper labor and longer hours"—the home office of the Lorry Mill is in Pawcatuck, R. I.—may find themselves regretting their hostility to a more "conservative" organization.

Saying which, we hasten to express the hope that, for the good of the communities involved, North Carolina's present disturbances may be short-lived.

Hard on the Human Machine

By T. E. Powers

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

SOME people have no sense of their own relativity.

Mr. Einstein might not if he saw that use made of his highly scientific term, but it exactly expresses the situation.

All life is relative. Everything is related to everything else. The importance of a thing depends on its relationship to everything else. In comparison with an ant, a blade of grass is as tall as a redwood tree. Just because it is a mere worm of green. And you and I, in our turn, could be fly specks on Mount Everest.

If the blade of grass could think, it would be most foolish for it to go around acting like a redwood tree, just because it felt like a redwood tree in comparison with an ant.

It would need to remember that in comparison with the rest of the world, it was a mere green, and that its life would be a very jumbled affair for that shade of green.

Which sense is a very necessary lesson for humans to learn as well as for grass.

Some people never realize their relation to the larger scheme of things. They get the redwood tree slant on themselves and stick to it. They never compare their experiences with other people's experiences.

They never see their needs or sufferings in relation to the whole mass of human need and suffering. To them, their and their necessities are the whole show. They make no comparisons and they will not permit comparisons to be made.

You cannot say to such a person, "But other people have had just as hard a time as you are having. Other people have faced as great difficulties."

They refuse to line up their lives beside other lives. They refuse to believe that there is any similarity between their lives or other lives. They can always, of course, reason to show that their lot is unique in human history.

To such people the universe revolves around them. They are given to self-pity, self-aggrandizement.

Life becomes a protracted day dream in which they are always playing the role of hero or martyr. Other people exist only as unimportant ghosts in their dream-world.

Reality does not exist. They are only themselves. Their spiritual eyes are turned in.

Psychologists call these people "inverts."

One hundred per cent inverts are fortunately rare, for complete inverts are the insane asylum.

But most of us have streaks of invert. Times when we think we're the Whole Show.

Periods when we lose our sense of relativity. Check up on your relativity every now and then. Are you attaching too much importance to your own success—your own grief—your own troubles—your own difficulties?

Then get busy. Snap out of it! The universe or someone or something will land on you HARD. Good-bye, Mr. and Mrs. Self.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor Boston American:

As one member of the Boston Bus Association who has not yet forgotten that prohibition as an issue was forced upon the country and was decisively answered at our recent election and who therefore regards with utter disgust the middle-class, invidious attempt of the association to drag its membership into falling into line to repeal the amendment, the Volstead act and all orders and regulations for the enforcement thereof—accompanied, be it noted, as a proposed resolution of the association is, by mention of the approval of all these repeals on the part of an unknown, newspaper, propagandist, outside-digger society—I occur to this writer that others of like mind with him might unite and take action to meet this sort of rebellion against the amendment, in order of justice by dissociating themselves from it and resigning from membership in such an association.

RAULF WARDLAW CLOAG, Boston, April 5

NEW YORK, April 8.—Diary of a modern Pym: Up and came later from Bloch, the clown, in London and from an irritated gentleman who dubbed me a square head, a good one on him, for it is the precise shape of an egg. And Maj. Bowes telephoned an offer to become a monotonous monologist.

To walk did put in at a hotel where I once lived for years and no one about it knew save a clergyman who addressed me as "Mr. McEnigle," so back home and worked awhile. Later with my wife to a tea party where came many, including H. T. Webster, Mr. Irvin, Herb Roth and Dr. George Dorney.

In the evening to Marion Gillespie for a turkey dinner and Justice Hall, there and later came Capt. Edward Potter and his mother whom I had not seen in years, and we sat talking until late of other days. To bed.

WHAT professional gentlemen call "pedagogical psychology" is an interesting study in crowded centers. There is a la-de-dah shop on the avenue with a heavy patronage for years, but its backers decided to swell the dividends. It moved directly across the street and business doubled. A certain type of store will not prosper on the side of the street, but prosper on the other. There are those that fail on corner sites and others like the cigar store—that rarely prosper in any other location.

NOTHING is so indicative of the Bover's decay than the grotesque fronted old Chinese restaurant. At night an orange splash of light from festive gas jets may be seen from the windows, but otherwise it has the abandoned dreariness of a warehouse. Inside the depths of gloom and dirt, however, the Chinese caterers strive to attract the plays men acted in a slaphdash fashion. Sometimes an actor quites the stage to hop out into the audience to chat with a friend. Patrons talk out loud during scene scenes and nobody appears interested. It is more a meeting place for the lonely, longing for their own people. During intermissions hawkers go through the lines selling gaudy aprons and molin seeds. If a baby cries, the players stop and talk to each other with no show of annoyance until the crying ceases.

A DISTINGUISHED novelist declares his most embarrassing moment was when he complimented a young fellow on the rare beauty of his mother, only to be told she was his wife.

Wait until he tries to sit down in what he thinks is a modernistic chair and finds out it is a book case. I pulled that one the other evening.
